Casey Rahn is an Associate in the Firm's Construction Practice. He has committed his practice to servicing public and private sector owners, developers, construction managers, general contractors, and subcontractors operating in and throughout the New York/Tri-State area.

Casey's prior experience includes representing owners, developers, construction managers, general contractors, and subcontractors in both transactional and litigation capacities, throughout all states of commercial, residential, and infrastructure development.

Casey handles a variety of construction-related matters, including, defective work claims; delay/acceleration impact assessments; contractor default and damages evaluation; extra-work and wrongful termination claims; mechanic's lien foreclosures; administrative violations; day-to-day business operations and management; and contract interpretation, drafting and negotiation of various agreements. Casey has also previously implemented internal compliance programs, investigative reviews, and crisis management planning and response initiatives for construction clients in the white collar criminal and regulatory compliance space.

Prior to joining Tarter Krinsky & Drogin, Casey served as a Senior Associate with Grae & Grae, LLC, and as a Litigation Associate with Rosenberg & Estis, P.C. and Peckar & Abramson, P.C., dedicating the entirety of his career to complex construction litigation and transactional disputes.
