

Rachel Hong

Counsel

rhong@tarterkrinsky.com

+1 212 574 0372

Rachel J. Hong is counsel in the Firm's Construction Practice. She represents property owners, construction managers, general contractors, subcontractors, educational institutions, and public benefit corporations on a broad range of construction matters. She draws upon her commercial litigation and construction experiences to guide clients through ongoing projects, analyzing and drafting contracts to mitigate risks, and addressing issues that may arise, including delays, liens, termination, nonpayment issues, and disputes with neighbors.

When litigation becomes necessary for her clients, Rachel is a tenacious advocate in all phases of litigation. She advocates on behalf of clients in court on matters including breach of contract, fraud, professional liability, property damage, and construction defects.

Education

- New York University (B.S.)
- Emory University School of Law (J.D.)

Clerkships

- Court of Common Pleas, First Judicial District of Pennsylvania (Honorable Edward C. Wright)
- New York Supreme Court, County of New York Commercial Division (Honorable Jeffrey K. Oing)
- United States Bankruptcy Court, Northern District of Georgia (Honorable Mary Grace Diehl)
- Georgia Supreme Court (Justice Robert Benham)

Bar Admissions

- New York
- U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York
- U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York

Related Services

- Construction
- Construction Disputes & Resolution

- New Jersey

Awards & Honors

- New York Super Lawyers "Rising Star," 2025