William Mastrogiannis is counsel in the Firm's Construction Practice. William represents municipalities, construction managers, general contractors, property owners, and sub-contractors on all aspects of project development and operations in the construction sector.

William draws upon his experience as a litigator to handle all aspects of construction litigation including non-payment claims, breach of contract claims, construction delays, mechanic lien foreclosure claims, complex construction defects and property damage claims on behalf of his clients.

William is actively involved in every stage of litigation, including drafting discovery demands and responses, reviewing construction contracts and insurance policies, conducting depositions, and drafting notices of motions and discovery requests. Additionally, William has experience managing cases pre-trial, as well as making court appearances for discovery conferences and motions.
